Atrium Companies, Inc. Elects Greg Faherty as New Board Member

DALLAS – Atrium Companies, Inc., the largest manufacturer of vinyl and aluminum windows and patio doors in North America, has announced that Greg Faherty, the company’s president and chief executive officer, has been elected to join its board of directors.

“I am very pleased to be invited to join our board,” said Faherty. “I greatly appreciate the vote of confidence this reflects - not just in me, personally, but in our entire management team here at Atrium.”

Faherty was appointed president and chief executive officer in January 2006, and brings experience from an extensive background of leadership roles. Larry Solari, Chairman of the Board for Atrium Companies, Inc., looks forward to seeing Faherty applying his expertise to this important position.

“We are delighted to have Greg Faherty join the Atrium board,” said Solari. “Since his appointment as chief executive officer 15 months ago, Greg has provided outstanding leadership to our people and a strategic vision for the company.”

Before joining the Atrium team, Faherty was president and CEO of Siplast Incorporated, an Irving, Texas subsidiary of the Icopal Group, one of the world’s largest manufacturers of roofing, waterproofing and building material products, based in Copenhagen, Denmark. Faherty also served as president and CEO of Roofers Mart of America and held various senior executive positions at Owens-Corning in Toledo, Ohio from 1965 to 1984, including vice president and general manager of its Commercial Roofing Division.
